

Hello, Brothers and Sisters! Happy New Year! We hope your holiday season has gone well and been beneficial.

For the past two weeks, we have been on a holiday break. During the first week, we visited family in Middle Tennessee. During our visit, we had the opportunity to visit three congregations that support us, two of which I had the opportunity to preach at. Also, during our visit, my wife began experiencing some moderate pain in her teeth due to her wisdom teeth growing in at an angle; the day after we got back to Johnson City, she had all four of her wisdom teeth removed. She has been recovering well and is still sore. Please pray that she continues to recover.

Savannah is now four months old and has developed some new skills. Since the last update, she has gotten significantly more vocal; she babbles constantly. I imagine she will be talking in no time. Also, she has learned to roll over on her own; she is still getting the hang of it but is getting there. She loves standing up. She has also begun teething And has hit sleep regression; I'm sure many of you parents can sympathize with this experience. All in all, she is doing wonderful.

This Quarter has gone very well. Greek continues to be a significant time sink and challenge, but I enjoy it more than I thought. Savannah probably knows as many Greek words as she does English; I often do the vocabulary reviews while holding her. I'm looking forward to getting into the Verb System next quarter.

With this Quarter coming to a close in a few weeks, so will my first year. We appreciate all the support so far; your prayers, cards, emails, texts, and calls mean much more to us than you know. It is extremely uplifting. We could not do this without you all.

Next quarter will be exciting! In addition to an excellent selection of classes, we will have our annual lectureship meeting on April 6th through 9th (see flyer attached below). The most exciting part is that four full-time students are joining, for a total of twelve full-time students. If anyone you know is interested in attending, please send them our way. We would love to speak with them. Distance learning is also available for those looking to deepen their studies. The time requirements and workload are adjusted appropriately. The flyer is attached as well.

As always, thank you again for all you do. Thank you for your partnership and support. We look forward to visiting those we did not get to see on this last break.
