

Happy March Brothers and Sisters! February went well; school is in full swing. I mistakenly informed you all that I was taking world religions, which will be next quarter. I was mistaken. In its place, we are covering Epistemology, that is, the study of knowledge and how one acquires knowledge. It is philosophical in nature and is quite different from the textual material. However, the more and more I learn, the more I see the need to study it. There are many colleges across the country that destroy the faith of our youth by introducing epistemology in a poor manner. I look forward to learning more in order to build the faith of others as well as myself and my family.

Speaking of family, Savannah is doing excellent. She loves to color and make different animal sounds; she has also picked up on sign language fairly quickly. She eats well, sleeps little, and plays hard. She enjoys playing with her animal siblings. Our 70 lbs dog is gentle and loves to play with her, and the cats both enjoy (tolerate) being hugged.

Sierra is doing well. She is teaching this quarter at church, and she loves teaching the kindergarten ages and teaches them frequently.

I am teaching the 5th/6th grade, and plan to cover chronology, history, and inspiration of the Bible this quarter with them. It will be fairly superficial, but I would like to begin laying that foundation; hopefully, it will be something they can fall back on when they hear what the world has to say. I also aim to go to prison twice a month. Last time I preached on James 1:22-25 using the Bible as a mirror, stressing the importance of action, and the danger of hearing-only.

Thank you for your prayers and contributions. We love you and appreciate the sacrifices you make. Thank you for being the example.

In Christian Love, Nathan, Sieraa, and Savannah Tate
